City lot to be donated for project

Senior citizens set building program, to seek fund donations

Canyon Senior Citizens, abandoning hope of receiving help from federal or state sources, will build a new building for their association on a donated lot in West Canyon.

A fund-raising drive to raise $50,000 for the structure begins this week with members of the association contacting local residents and businessmen for one-time donations.

Members of the association voted Thursday night to build the 100' x 40' structure on a 140' x 100' lot at Second Street and Fourth Avenue in Canyon.

In doing so, they adopted a plan hashed out by directors of the group during a meeting Thursday night at the community center.

Directors reviewed tentative building plans prepared by Paul Glovier and discussed ways to raise the funds needed for the project.

A local business firm has offered to donate the lot to the senior citizens for their building, but the land has not yet been deeded to the group.

Glovier reported he had done preliminary checking on zoning and other requirements for the lot and that the building anticipated for the lot would meet city specifications.

He said sewer lines would have to be run to the lot at a cost of about $250, but that electricity was available. Gas lines do not run to the lot either.

The maximum square footage which can be constructed on the lot is 400 square feet, he said, and 25 car parking spaces must be constructed on the lot.

He said these requirements would be no trouble to meet.

Director Tom Black urged directors to take a conservative approach toward finding funds for the construction project.

"I'm not counting on any pledges," he said in outlining a program for raising the needed funds. He said he would not depend, either, on federal or other funds from governmental agencies for the construction.

"I have no doubt that this bunch can raise that money," he said, tossing a $1000 check on the table donated by a local business firm.

"Let's set our sights on raising the full figure," President Dutch Cleavinger told the directors.

A goal of $50,000 was set for the fund-raising, the amount needed to build and equip the new building.

Accounts have been opened at both Canyon First National Bank and West Texas State Bank to accept donations for the project.

The senior citizens group, with about 100 members, have been disappointed twice recently when plans for a building fell through.

They had initially hoped to purchase the old Neblett Hospital building for $40,000 from the hospital board but became discouraged after county commissioners told them the building would cost too much to maintain and hesitated to donate funds to aid in the project.

They had also hoped to receive about $6000 in funds from the federal Housing and Urban Development Department through community development grant money.

But, HUD guidelines eliminated the possibility of funds from that source even after city commissioners had given initial approval to the allocation.

The senior citizens have likewise been unable to locate any federal funds for construction of a building, although they have found several federal sources for funds for maintining and operating the building once it is constructed.

The senior citizens will meet again at 7 p.m. Thursday at the community center here to continue planning and pursuing their fund-raising drive.

In seeking new industries

City's assets touted, but need cited for aggressive attitude

Canyon has tremendous assets to tout when courting potential industry, but must put together a forceful and aggressive approach in attempting to attract industry to the area, a Texas Industrial Commission consultant said Thursday.

That aggressive sales approach should be aimed at spin-off industries which could well be attracted to Canyon to service or utilize products from existing industries in the Amarillo area, Homer Tucker said following a four-hour industrial sales team training seminar here.

Tucker, one of three main speakers at the seminar which was attended by 25 local residents, said Canyon is in a geographical area of Texas which has possibly the greatest potential for industrial development.

"You have good transportation, you have the university, wonderful educational facilities," he said. "All the things you have are tremendous assets that are marketable."

Tucker said local civic leaders should organize to focus on potential industries which would in some way relate to industries either already existing around Amarillo or industries which have announced they will open factories in the Amarillo vicinity, industries such as the American Smelting and Refining Co.'s new plant, or the Corning fiberglas plant.

In pursuing spin-off industries, Larry Milner of Southwestern Public Service Co.'s area development department, pointed out a number of potential industries civic leaders could begin pursuing.

He cited industries which would mesh with fiberglas production, industries to mesh with the farm economy of the Canyon area, and other smaller industries which would be natural to the area.

Just as important as seeking new industry, Milner said, is aiding expansion of existing industry. He suggested civic leaders here approach existing industries to offer aid in financing expansions.

"You should do everything you can for existing manufacturers first," he said, "to ask what you can do to assist them."

Another important factor in generating new money for Canyon is the full use of tourism.

Milner and those at the seminar agreed Canyon should make a stronger effort to seek conventions or smaller meetings which bring people into town.

Doyle Moore, consultant for area development with the electric company, told those present that there are various ways to find potential industries which might locate in the Canyon area.

Prospecting for industries which are relocating or expanding is the most competitive business in the world, Moore

Economic future bleak, WTSU professors say

Bleak would be an almost optimistic term to use in describing the picture of the American economic outlook drawn Thursday night by three West Texas State University professors here.

The American people are going to have to return to business and industry the opportunity for profitability, or the country's economy faces strangulation, Dr. Jerry Miller, Dr. Pat Kelso and Herschel Coffee, told participants in a WTSU inderdepartmental seminar.

Miller, professor of business, said if the American laborer can come to recognize that his productivity is all important to the health of the nation's economy, the almost inevitable calamity of economic downfall could be averted.

Ostensibly focusing on the outlook for common stock prices, Miller's talk ranged broadly over the current economic woes of America and from those current woes he painted a picture of worsening conditions in the future.

The current relatively high Dow-Jones industrial average is due, he said, to lowering of interest rates.

But, he said, only two factors can be isolated of many which affect stock prices to point to a continued bull market: (a) we have a large natural resource base, and (b) we have also been able to find ways out of our problems in the past.

"When we look at all the other factors that affect the market place they seem to come up negative," he said.

Citing average financial ratios for the top 29 companies on the Dow Jones industrials, he noted that since 1950 almost every measure of profitiability has taken a nosedive.

Return on net worth for the companies has dropped from 16.19 per cent in 1949 to 12.61 per cent in 1973. Return on assets has dropped from 10.74 per cent in 1949 to 6.83 per cent in 1973. Return on net property, has dropped from 34.85 per cent in 1949 to 17.90 per cent in 1973.

"Their ability to meet their obligations has deterioriated, and profitiability has been cut," he said. Any measure of the economic health of industry points to "tremendous deterioriation."

Citing other figures, Miller said employee compensation since 1950 has taken a continually rising cut of the national income while farm income and business profits have taken an increasingly smaller share.

County to ask gas users' aid

At the behest of Farmer-Commissioner Jim Fletcher, Randall County commissioners Monday will consider passage of a resolution calling for the Federal Power Commission to reconsider its priority ruling on natural gas for irrigation wells.

Fletcher, who represents an urban-rural precinct on the commission, indicated Friday he will propose the resolution to be sent the FPC, which recently changed priorities on natural gas allocations, during the regular Monday session of the commissioners.

Fletcher explained that in recent action the FPC gave irrigation wells a number three priority for the allocation of natural gas in case of shortages. Formerly, the irrigation well gas users had a number two priority.

"There's a feeling among irrigation people that with a number three priority if there are shortages, that there could be some limitations or curtailment of service," he said. "A number two priority would be high enough that there wouldn't be an interruption of service to irrigation wells."

He said the resolution he'll introduce Monday will call for the FPC to restore a number two priority to natural gas irrigation well users.

Randall County Farm Bureau President Joe Turpin indicated last week his board of directors will be eyeing the FPC's action during their regular meeting this Thursday at the Farm Bureau Building.

Turpin said most area irrigation well natural gas users have contracts with the gas company which allow the company to interrupt service if needed, anyway.

"They can cut off the supply now if there's a danger of homes going without gas at this time," Turpin said. "There have been some interruptions in the past few years."

He said the FPC ruling was not a major concern now in this area.

County Agent John Brazzil said natural gas is the prime irrigation fuel in the Panhandle, and that peak loads of gas useage occur during the hot summer months when irrigation wells are running at full speed.

He said individuals he's discussed the FPC ruling with are concerned about its impact should fuel run 'short this

Leaders set goals for prospecting

Canyon civic leaders, fired up after the four-hour industrial training seminar here Thursday, indicated they will begin laying plans immediately to actively seek small industry for the city.

A search for heavy industry was ruled out by Weldon Trice, president of the chamber of commerce, and John Childs of First National Bank.

"I feel like most businessmen and university people are interested in getting something," Trice said, noting that land and resources are not available for large-scale industrial locations here.

"After looking at this (the seminar), I think there are sure a lot of possibilities we could look into," he said.

Childs said an initial goal must be location of a suitable land site for industry.

And, he said civic leaders must also actively seek prospects.

He said the most logical approach will be to key on spin-offs from industries already in operation in Amarillo. Fiberglas related industries or industries related to copper production would be good prospects, he said.

Childs indicated the team approach to presenting facts about financing and labor and local conditions has already been utilized in Canyon to attract industrial prospects.

In the past year, at least two industries have shown interest in Canyon and officials have visited the city to meet with Childs and other local representatives.

Canyon has yet to attract an industry to the city from this list of prospects, however, and one has already located close to Amarillo.

Trice said in addition to an active search for new industry, the civic leaders must organize to meet with existing industry here to offer aid in expansions.

And, he pointed out, too, that the city must continue efforts to attract tourists to Canyon.

Trustee Don Marsh fails to file; little opposition in other races

Incumbent Don Marsh of Amarillo, who cast a yes vote last November to allow the Amarillo School District to annex about 76 acres of Canyon School District land, will not seek re-election to the Randall County Board of School Trustees.

Marsh failed to file for office before the deadline passed Wednesday afternoon. The election has been called for April 5, but there is still controversey over whether an election will be held in the precinct Marsh represents.

When contacted at his office Thursday, Marsh said simply that he "just didn't go" to Canyon to file for re-election.

He has served since 1969 when he was initially appointed to the boaru, which has appellate jurisdiction over the Canyon School Board in matters such as annexation and detachment of property. He did file for re-election to the post in 1973, but due to a controversey over who could and could not vote for him in that balloting, his name was never placed on the ballot and he has been serving presumabley under a constitutional article which allows incumbents to serve until their successors are named.

Randall County district attorney's staff is still waiting for an opinion from the state Attorney General concerning who can and who cannot vote for the elected representative from the Marsh precinct, which lies wholly within the Amarillo School District. An old law stated that electors in a school district not under the jurisdiction of the county board of trustees could not vote for the county trustee. A newer law, however, does not contain that clause.

While Marsh has not filed for re-election, he could continue to serve until his successor is elected or selected even though another Amarillo man has filed for election to the spot on the board.

Gordon Hendricks of Amarillo, an insurance agent, has filed for Marsh's place. Hendricks has not revealed his opinion of whether Amarillo School District should be allowed to detach property from Canyon for subsequent annexation.

The county board of trustees became the focal point for a feud over a 76-acre tract of development property in the north part of the Canyon district after five residents petitioned to have the property detached from Canyon and annexed to Amarillo's district.

The Canyon School Board opposed the move, but the Amarillo district gave encouragement and in mid-November 1974, the county board voted 3-2 to allow Amarillo to annex the property.

The Canyon board filed an immediate appeal with the Texas Commissioner of Education and appeared for a hearing in January. A decision is still pending in the appeal.

Charles Purcell of Amarillo, who voted no on the issue of annexation, has filed for re-election to the county board. He will run unopposed on the ballot.

In National Merit Scholarship program

Three seniors named finalists

Three Canyon High School seniors have been named National Merit Scholarship finalists, an elite honor which places them in the top one-half of one per cent of high school students in the country.

Student finalists in the annual competition are Wayne King, son of Mr. and Mrs. Frank R. King; John Watkins, son of Dr. and Mrs. Lloyd I. Watkins; and Irene Mitchell, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Albert Mitchell, all of Canyon.

The three ha also been named National Merit Scholarship semi-finalists. As finalists, they are eligible for award of one of 3500 academic scholarships for college study.

Only 14,000 high school seniors in the United States are named finalists in the competition.

High School Principal John Sommer said the three finalists from Canyon High represent "was many as we've ever had — if not more. I don't know that we've ever had three finalists before."

Sommer said the fact that three finalists are from Canyon is indicative of the fine student body.

"For a school our size it's pretty good," he said. "It's an indication of a pretty strong student body."

The three finalists have been cited with certificates from the national competition for "outstanding academic ability."

Sheryl Sommer was commended by the organization although she was not named a semi-finalists in the competition. She is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. John Sommer.

Miss Mitchell, who is president of the CHS JETS organization this year, is also a member of the National Honor Society.

Watkins, also a member of the National Honor Society, is active in speech, drama and debate activities at the school. He is a member of the student council and vice president of the drama club. He attended a debate workshop at West Texas State University last summer and has won numerous awards for his speaking. Last summer he won a trip to Washington, D.C., after winning a speech contest sponsored by the Swisher Electric Cooperative.

King, also a member of JETS and the National Honor Society, attend a science institute at the Rose-Hulman Institute of Technology last summer.

Basics For Happiness

By ANN BROWN

All anyone really wants is to be happy, and there are only three essentials to happiness:

1. Someone to love.
2. Some work to do.
3. And something to look forward to.

Viktor Frankl, the renown Jewish psychiatrist, said "A man who has a why for living can endure almost any how." And the noble doctor was living proof of his theory.

Dr. Frankl had been deprived of family, country, wealth, and health; all he had left was his life. Yet he survived years of unbeliavable torture in a German extermination camp because he had a why for living: He had to get the book in his mind on paper.

The doctor's book has probably blessed more lives than he could have ever touched had he been allowed to practice medicine for a lifetime. He was the perfect illustration of George L. Banks' poem:

I live for those who love me,
Whose hearts are kind and true.
For the heavens that shine above me.
And the good that I can do.

All Dr. Frankl's family and friends had been exterminated, but he still loved God and humanity; and God and humanity loved him.

Happiness has to be given away, or it self destructs. It's very much like fresh-cut flowers: You can give them away while they are beautiful, or keep them and watch them wither and die.

No one can be unhappy who is giving happiness to others.

Life is much like a piano. The harmony is there—and the cacophony. Anyone who learns to play it correctly can bring forth beauty. Play it contrary to the rules, and it gives nothing but noise and irritation.

A tourist traveling through Texas would not use a California road map.

Our Creator has provided minute and specific instructions to guide us to happy, fruitful, victorious lives. If we neglect to read—or fail to heed—the instructions, whose fault is it?

The first thing God ever said was not good was for man to live alone. The home is life's greatest blessing. Yet one town recorded 15 marriages and 114 divorces during 1974.

The heartache in the wake of broken homes is incalculable. And probably the children involved suffer the most damage.

To little children, their parents battling each other might be compared to the dilemma Christians would be in if they discovered Christ and the Holy Spirit were at war.

It's true in many cases that a series of unavoidable or unfortunate circumstances may jeopardize a marriage. But rational people recognize the problem, make allowances for it, and seek a solution.

It is vital to solve the problem immediately, not let it linger and fester. The divine instruction is "let not the sun go down upon your wrath" (Eph. 4:26).

There is no such thing as constant love, joy, and peace. No one ever found it in the single state, why expect to find it in marriage? In fact, it seems that a certain amount of stress is essential to emotional health.

By the time children arrive, however, parents should have learned to live together in reasonable harmony.

Man is adaptable, else he would never have survived on this planet. Some children grow up amid such misery and turmoil that they assume life is supposed to be like that, and they perpetuate it in their own homes.

Children need to believe both parents are good. When the home breaks up, they have no choice but to blame at least one parent for the disaster. And to children it is a disaster—even grown-up ones.

The most precious gift any parent will ever be able to give his child is a Godly home. It is also the greatest blessing attainable for oneself.

Probably no other human relationship requires as much wisdom, patience, tact, and forgiveness as does marriage. But no other venture pays such rich dividends either.

All three essentials for happiness are involved in building a home: love, work, and the highest hope for human happiness.

WT Orchestra Sets Concert

Music for strings by Grieg, Corelli, Bach and Britten has been programmed for the West Texas State University Symphony Orchestra concert at 8 p.m. Monday.

The orchestra under the direction of Dr. Michael Paul Matesky will perform in the Fine Arts Theatre.

Prelude and Sarabande from Greig's Suite opus 40, subtitled "in olden style from Holberg's time," will open the program.

Featured in the Corelli Concerto Grosso opus 6 #1 will be Greg Shaffer and Jimmy Caddell, violins; and James Wolden, cello.

Continuing in the baroque vein, the orchestra will perform the third of Bach's Brandenburg Concertos, in G major.

The program will conclude with "Simple Symphony" by contemporary English composer Benjamin Britten. Based entirely on material from works composed by Britten between the ages of nine and 12, the symphony reflects youthful exuberance in movements designated Boisterous Bouree, Playful Pizzicato, Sentimental Saraband and Frolicsome Finale.

Occult Topic Of Lectures

The occult world will be the focal point of the West Texas State University Willson Lecture Series to be held April 7 to 9.

The guest lecturer will be Dr. John P. Newport of the Southwestern Baptist Theological Seminary in Fort Worth, where he is professor of philosophy of religion.

In addition to discussions with students and smaller groups, Dr. Newport will speak on "The Heart of the Occult World: Magic and Witchcraft," "Exorcism of Demons: Christian or Occult?" and "The Appeal of the Occult World: Disclosure of the Future and Spiritual Worlds."

The Missouri native holds the Bachelor of Arts and honorary Theology and the Doctor of Theology from Southern Baptist Theological Seminary, Louisville, Kentucky; the Master of Arts in philosophy from Texas Christian University and the Doctor of Philosophy from the University of Edinburgh, Scotland. Dr. Newport has been minister of churches in Kentucky, Mississippi and Tulsa, Oklahoma. He is the author of numerous scholarly and popular articles which have appeared in journals, encyclopedias and books. He is the author of "Theology and Contemporary Art Forms," "Demons, Demons, Demons" and "Why Christians Fight Over the Bible."

Girls Basketball: A Year Round Program

"If we could have played the whole game like we played the fourth quarter, we would have been in good shape."

This is the feeling expressed by Coach Bob Schneider as he looks back on the state championship game in which his Girl Eagles lost.

During the last quarter of the game, the girls were down as much as 18 points and made a comeback bid but the clock was not in their favor and time expired with the Canyon girls eight points behind.

Another thing not in the favor of Canyon was foul trouble. "The game was an aggressive, physical game," Schneider said. Robena Johnson got into foul trouble the first period. At the close of the initial quarter, Miss Johnson had three fouls.

"When you get into foul trouble, you just can't play your game. We try to adjust to things like that but sometimes you don't," Schneider said.

"We didn't play as good of basketball as we could have," he said.

The girls finished the season with a record-breaking 35-1 standing.

The record might last for a year because Schneider will welcome back next year most of this year's team. The first four forwards, Robena Johnson, Louise Davis, Becky Williams and Deedy Johnson will return along with starting guard Marci Davis.

Graduation will claim the other two starting guards Denice Hamblen and Penny Peckenpaugh. Polly Crawford, Brenda Stevens and Cheryl Brown have also played their last game in a Canyon uniform.

Other returning lettermen include Lisa Cathey, Renee McDonald and Janet Sluder.

With this season gone, Schneider and his assistants will start concentrating on the girl's track team.

The girls will run track until April when they will come back to the gym and work on basketball along with track.

During the summer, the CHS gym will be open as it has been in the past, according to Schneider. The summer workouts are informal and voluntary. "There are usually around 25 to 30 in the gym each night it's open during the summer," Schneider said.

This year-round basketball program will very likely put another Canyon girl's basketball team in the state finals in 1976.

BSP Sorority Has Program

"Inner Self" was the program presented by Monita Benham at Tuesday's meeting of Xi Kappa Zeta Chapter of Beta Sigma Phi sorority when members met in the home of Virginia Johnston.

Mrs. Benham, chapter president, also conducted the business session as the chapter voted not to back the General Federation of Women's Clubs proposal for backing of "women's lib activities."

Convention reports were given by Shirley Stevens and Sue Michael regarding the recent area convention of Beta Sigma Phi held in Amarillo.

Members present were Betty Hunter, Sue Michael, Shirley Stevens, Monita Benham and Virginia Johnston. Next meeting will be the officer election session on March 18.

'Iron Orchard' Topic

"The Iron Orchard" written by Tom Pendleton will be reviewed by Mrs. Rose Kinzer for members of the Woman's Book Club at a meeting Wednesday, March 12.

Appearance Deceiving

By CARROLL WILSON

The spirit of Joseph McCarthy is alive and well in Canyon, Texas.

You remember Joe McCarthy. He's that wonderful fellow of the '50s who brought you a Communist under every rock.

I ran into his apparition Tuesday night out at West Texas State University during a discussion on the proposed Equal Rights Amendment, and I can report he hasn't changed much in the last twenty years.

I was sitting there on the front row, listening to a professor explain why he'd vote for the ERA and I glanced down the row of chairs to my left and about seven chairs down there was this woman. And, she turned to me and spat under her breath and directed at me the epithet: "Communist."

I guess the easiest way to describe how she said it, her demeanor, is to illustrate how she didn't say it.

It wasn't like Gore Vidal turning to William F. Buckley, Jr. and telling the masterful conservative he's a neo-Nazi. Nor, on the other hand was it like Buckley turning to the novelist and telling him he's a homosexual.

Oh, people have called me names before, but this incident doesn't match other similar incidents.

A monstrous, ugly sergeant told me one time I was an unteachable clod because I couldn't take a part and reassemble an M-16 rifle in 10 seconds flat. I had to agree with him.

But, it wasn't like that.

Nor was it like somebody coming up to you on the street and saying without a prelude: "Wilson, you've got bad breath."

Although that's close. I mean, from everything I've learned about Communists, I'd expect them to at least have bad breath.

Anyway, this woman, who called me a Communist, was pretty angry. I could tell that from her face.

After she called me a Communist, I kinda grinned at her. Her comment had been almost inaudible and I thought I'd misunderstood what she'd said.

I initially thought she'd called me a Columnist.

"How flattering," I thought. "She recognized me and I don't even have a name tag on. Must be one of my fans."

Then I realized that from the look on her face, she didn't mean whatever word she used to be flattering.

So I figured if she said Columnist, she must have had me confused with somebody else and I finally deduced that she must have thought I was James Kilpatrick, the nationally syndicated columnist. Because Kilpatrict wrote a column in Tuesday morning's Amarillo newspaper calling for eliminating February from our calendars. Now that's an idea Marx himself could embrace.

No, I finally had to admit to myself, the woman called me a Communist.

After a cursory glance at my surroundings—just to ensure I wasn't under a rock—I began studying faces in the crowd. Never can tell where an FBI agent is going to show up and I could just see an entry in my dossier: "Wilson, Carroll P., exposed as a Communist at public meeting, March 4, 1975.

Being called a Communist, when you're just sitting there doing nothing, is paranoia-inducing. It makes you want to run home and look in the mirror to make sure you're still you. Kind of like constantly worrying about whether your zipper's zipped up.

My wife usually takes care of my appearance before I leave the house to go anywhere. "Carroll," she'll say, "that tie looks terrible with those slacks," Or, "Carroll, you forgot your belt again."

I left home as usual Tuesday night and she didn't say "Honey, your Marx is at right Engles with your Lenin shirt."

I guess what I'm really trying to say is that it's my wife's fault. If I left home Tuesday looking like a Communist, she should have caught it.

We had a big argument about it when I got home Tuesday night.

Wednesday morning she pulled inspection at the front door and I left home looking just like a stodgy old Presbyterian.

Trumpet Recital Due Wednesday

Douglas Laramore, West Texas State University graduate music major, will present a trumpet recital at 8 p.m. Wednesday in the Fine Arts Theatre. Accompanist for the graduate recital is Mary Helen Demus.

Laramore, who is a graduate assistant in the music department, and a member of Kappa Kappa Psi service fraternity, performs with the WT lab band, the Tiffany Brass Dance Ensemble and the Amarillo Symphony Orchestra. He is a trumpet student of David Ritter.

Programmed for the graduate recital are Sonata by Halsey Stephens, Suite by Paul Bonneau and Sonata for two trumpets and piano by Domenico Gabrieli, in which Van Sharp will perform with Laramore.

The recital will conclude with Music for Brass Instruments by Ingolf Dahl. Performing with Laramore in the Dahl will be Van Sharp, trumpet; Donna Saylor, horn; Gary Mingus, trombone; and Paul Infanti, tuba.

Laramore is the son of J.L. Laramore of Pampa.

Judging Team Takes Second

The Canyon High School livestock judging team won second place in over-all competition in a contest held in Pampa Tuesday.

Out of a possible 1100 total points, the Canyon team scored 980.

There were 75 teams entered in the contest in which Tascosa High of Amarillo took first place honors.

According to Lee Moore, CHS agriculture instructor, the Canyon team has a good chance to qualify for the upcoming state meet. To earn the right to go to the state meet, the team will have to place in the regional meet to be held on the Texas Tech University campus later this spring.

Music Recital Set For Monday

Selected students from the music department at West Texas State University will be presented in recital at 4 p.m. Monday in the Fine Arts Theatre.

Included in the program will be "Cosi, amor, me fai languir" by Stradella, sung by Marilyn Stroope; Concerto in D minor BWV 1054 by Bach, Larry Caviness, piano; "Every valley shall be exalted" by Handel, Billy Talley, tenor; "Fleur jetee" by Faure, Kathy McNeil, soprano; Suite No. 1 by Bach, Ron Graves, euphonium; and "Un marito, conne care" by Mozart, D'Ann Hays, soprano.

Also included in the recital will be an aria from Wagner's Tannhauser, sung by Lee Kendle; Intermezzo by Brahms, Randy Lackey, piano; "Nuit d'etoiles" by Debussy, Rosemary Burkhart, soprano; and "Non piu andrai" by Mozart, Frank Davis, brass-baritone.

English Prof. Wins Award

West Texas State University Assistant Professor of English Charmazel Dudt took home the only prize awarded at the 40th annual Conference of College Teachers of English held recently in Austin.

For her Shakespearean paper entitled "Of That Time, Of That Place: Shakespeare's Illyria," Dr. Dudt received a $50 first place award in the R.A. Law Award competition. Not only was Dr. Dudt the first recipient of the award, but it was the first time she had entered a paper in a competition.

"It was beginner's luck," Dr. Dudt noted. More than 400 participants were present at the conference.

Her paper is based on Shakespeare's play "Twelfth Night."

"This play reflects the change from Elizabethan grandeur and magnificence to the Jacobean era and the coming of the Puritan threat," Dr. Dudt said. "It shows the decay of the Renaissance and how man was very aware that his world would not last."

Dr. Pat Sullivan, head of the WTSU English Department and a member of the executive committee, presided over the American Literature session held Saturday. Dr. Sue Park, associate professor of English, also presented an essay entitled "Variations on a Theme: The Death of the Father in the Short Fiction of Joyce Carol Oates."

Others from WTSU attending the conference were Dr. Richard Moseley, associate professor of English, Mrs. Kathleen Collins, instructor of English, and Mrs. Helen Wossum, instructor of English.

School's Out Early Wed.

The schools in Randall County will be dismissed at 2:30 p.m. Wednesday instead of the usual time.

The teachers will take the time for departmental meetings and inservice study. This procedure will take place once a month throughout the rest of the school year.

The Joint Professional Communication Committee, a part of the Texas State Teachers Association, recommended the program. This is an experimental program aimed toward upgrading education procedures.

Reader Says Driver Ed. Inconvenient As Held

Dear Mr. Martin:

I am writing concerning the Drivers' Education Program at Canyon High School. It has been a real inconveniance to me and my family. I know it is a bother to other families who live out in the country.

Seven o'clock in the morning is just too early to have any kind of class. The class also meets for 4 hours on Saturday which can not be made up. This prevents any of the kids involved in the class from going out of town.

I think Drivers' Education should be a part of the school curriculum. It would just take one quarter to complete the course. The teaching and driving parts could both be taken care of during an hour-long period each day of the quarter. Why not give all those parents who have to get up at 6:00 or 6:30 to take their kids to Drivers' Ed a break?

There is another aspect involved: the saving of gas. If it were held during school, think how much gas the parents would save. The parents would no longer have to spend 2 weeks of their summer taking their teenager to Drivers' Ed.

This would help so many families because a large percentage of CISD families live outside of Canyon.

I don't know if a credit should be given but what is one credit? There is ample time to get enough quarters to graduate. I hope that you school board members will take my proposal into consideration.

School Financing Complex Problem

By BOB SIMPSON

PUBLIC SCHOOL FINANCING is without a doubt the most important signle issue facing the 64th legislature.

This session we will be hard pressed to find a workable solution for this extremely complex problem.

The financing of public education in Texas has remained virtually unchanged since 1949 when the Gilmer-Aiken Act created the Minimum Foundation Program.

Since the act was put into effect (to provide the greatest assistance to those districts having the least amount of local wealth) times have changed, and the present formula produces many inequities.

UNDER THE MINIMUM FOUNDATION PROGRAM, the state pays 80 per cent of school districts' budgets (which are directly tied to the local tax base) while 20 per cent comes from local sources. The actual percentage paid to a local district varies because the state attempts to measure each district's ability to pay.

THE PROBLEM SEEMS TO LIE IN THE fact that some of the school districts in Texas have a smaller tax base than their sister districts. Under the present funding formula, in many cases, the school district with the low tax base receives less than the higher tax base school district.

In addition, each school district has the option with its financial ability to go beyond the Foundation Program, that is, to employ more teachers than the state requires and to provide other educational services. All capital expenditures for construction of buildings is the responsibility of the local districts. When these factors are considered the state pays only 46 per cent of the total cost of education.

AS A RESULT OF THE DIFFERENT LEVELS of enrichment and the apparent inadequacies of the Foundation Program some districts spend less than $500 per student, while others spend more than $2,000 per student. Provident City in Warton County spends more than $5,500 per student.

THE FEDERAL DISTRICT COURT in San Antonio, which tried the landmark Rodriquez case, found the Texas system of public school financing unconstitutional since it:

"discriminates on the basis of wealth by permitting citizens of affluent districts to provide a higher quality of education for their children while paying lower taxes. . .and therefore, denies equal protection of the laws."

On March 21, 1973, the U.S. Supreme Court, by vote of 5 to 4, overturned the district court decision, holding that this was not a Constitutional question, but stated:

". . .the ultimate solution must come from the lawmakers and from the democratic pressures of those who elect them."

THIS, THEN IS THE BACKGROUND of the problem facing this session of the Texas Legislature. In future columns, I will discuss several proposals to solve this problem.

SOME INTERESTING STATISTICS REGARDING EDUCATION IN TEXAS:

38 states spend more dollars per child on education.

37 states pay higher teacher salaries.

5 states have lower per capita state taxes.

5 states spend a larger percentage of total budget on education.

4 states have higher personal income.

2 states have higher industrial wealth.

2 states have larger average classroom size.

No state has a higher school drop-out rate.

Education High Priority In Early Years Here

(Editor's Note: The following article, in recognition of Canyon Public School Week, was taken from the master's thesis of Mrs. Georgia Lee, a teacher at Canyon High School. The article covers only the first 10 years of existence of the Canyon school system.)

Only months after Randall County was officially organized as its own governmental entity, the first school in Canyon opened its doors in the land office of the city's founder, L.G. Conner.

The small, one-room, unpainted building located on the east side of the downtown square had an enrollment of six children when it opened in the fall of 1889.

Three of the first students were children of Mr. and Mrs. A.L. Hammond originally from Vermont and Georgia, and the other three were children of Mr. and Mrs. Nicholas Thompson, who had moved to Texas and Canyon from Norway. The children ranged in age from six to 15.

The sister of a T-Anchor Ranch cowboy, Miss Emma Turner, was the first teacher in the city. A native of Kentucky, she came to Canyon to teach the young school at a salary of $40 per month and was apparently popular with her students. One student described her: "She was a lady of very charming manners and lovable disposition and endeared herself to all who knew her."

Funding for the first school came through subscription from the citizens of Canyon and the T-Anchor cowboys. Individual pledges were extracted from these folks and, in fact, the liberal donations of the ranch hands made the first school possible.

The Tascosa Pioneer, newspaper for that Panhandle city, contained a news item in fall 1890 which might give a hint as to the motive of the cowboys in their generosity for the school system: "Canyon City has some eighteen or twenty young men and old bachelors and only two young ladies. Come west young ladies, come west."

The first county superintendent of schools was M.M. McGee, the only man in the county with practical political experience, who was elected county judge in the first elections of July 1889. By virtue of his office, he became the first exofficio county superintendent of schools.

From the time the first school opened in Canyon in fall 1889, until January 1890, the population of the city and area had apparently grown somewhat because during the latter month five additional students enrolled under Miss Turner. These students ranged in age from four to eight years of age.

The curriculum that first year consisted of the traditional three Rs, geography, spelling and history. Mrs. J.W. Beall, daughter of M.M. McGee and one of these first eleven students, described the first year in the school:

"The most formidable thing about the school was a small braided quirt made up of colored horse hair which Miss Turner kept in a drawer of her desk in a very convenient place. This quirt she sometimes, but not often, used on unruly students."

Sometime before the six-month school term was over, and after the completion of the county courthouse, the school moved from the land office into the frame building which had been constructed as a temporary courthouse.

The school term apparently ended in March. But, in the meantime, the citizens of Canyon, especially W.C. Baird, arranged for the first building for the school. Conner donated one block of land for the structure, located on the southeast block of the land on which the present junior high school now stands.

The new three-room frame building was completed before the next school term at a cost of $2500.

As Canyon City grew, so did the number of school children. While in 1890 the county population stood at 187, there were that fall twenty students in classes.

Whether Miss Turner taught that second year has not been ascertained, but Clyde McElroy, who enrolled in the first schoolhouse sometime in 1890, said for several years the teacher was someone from the community who had knowledge largely from experience rather than schooling. He said standardized texts were not used and each student had a different book.

"They did acquire some knowledge even though the teacher had to teach from about twenty-five different books," he said.

Those early days in the Canyon school were typically pioneer.

One early student recalls that water was dispensed from a bucket fetched by an older student and brought into the school house where all the students drank from a community drinking cup. By horseback or in buggies, the children made their ways to school even in the worst winter weather.

The early school had no organized athetic program — just carefree recesses both in the morning and the afternoon. At that time popular games were marbles, mumble-peg, stinkbase, town ball, shinny, and hop-skip-and-jump.

But, the children were not above a little horseplay. One day a boy rode his horse into the little frame school house. The agitated principal told the boy he should tie himself to the hitching rack outside and leave the horse in school. He thought the horse had more sense than the boy.

Mamie Conner recalled one winter when someone left a window or door open in the school building and during the night it rained. A solid sheet of ice was formed over the floor of one of the school rooms and the children had a great time skating on the ice at recess.

Through 1895, the teachers who had taught in Canyon were Miss Turner, T.A. Dowlen, "Professor" Rhine, and Kate Mills.

During the period, Canyon was steadily growing and in 1893, the following item appeared in the local newspaper: "We have one blacksmith shop, one butcher shop, one saloon, one livery stable, two wagonyards, two hotels, three stores, a $2500 school house, an $8200 courthouse, and a number of resident houses."

But, Canyon City was seeking even more immigrants and numerous news items in the Canyon newspaper proclaimed the merits of the town.

"In proportion to population, no county in Texas is ahead of Randall in her educational facilities and interest . . ." the article said.

The subscription school era came to an end in Canyon in 1896, when the county received $1200 from the state school fund, the first assistance to be received from the state. In the same year a local tax of 25 cents was assessed for the construction of much needed new school buildings. Apparently during the next several years taxes and tuition from children over 17 and under 8 paid for the school operation.

When school opened in the fall of 1896, the enrollment had grown to warrant two teachers. Cyrus Eakman, elected judge in 1892, resigned as county judge and became principal of the school, where he taught the older children. Miss Gillian Sink taught the younger ones.

One student who began school here in 1896, remembers that there were few discipline problems in the Canyon school. The term lasted nine months and the students attended regularly, not dismissing during the year to aid their farmer parents. The only holidays were at Christmas and Thanksgiving.

Families who lived on ranches and farms some distance from Canyon often made arrangements for the family to move into town during the school year so the children could attend the school, because the rural school terms were short and sometimes only during summer months.

Mollie Hester gave the following account of the school in 1897:

"Canyon had one school with three teachers, Professor Cyrus Eakman, principal, and two lady teachers, Miss Ollie Beaseley and Miss Lillie Leonard. We all had single desks. I remember Bertie Long, later Mrs. Jack Campbell, sat in front of me, and one day she asked Mr. Eakman if she could put on her bonnet, that the light was hurting her eyes, and he said she could. She had her dinner pail setting beside her and she went to eating. Mr. Eakman caught her, asked her if she was eating, and of course, she said 'no,' he asked me, also, at the time if Miss Bertie was eating, and I said I couldn't see her, and he said, 'Miss Mollie, you come up here to me. I think you can see her a little better.' So, I had to stand in the middle of the floor about one half an hour. It just nearly killed me, but I didn't cry and never betrayed her . . ."

In 1898, the railroad came to Canyon with Santa Fe track reaching from Amarillo to the city in August.

School opened that fall with a new principal, Mr. O'Neal, and two assistants. That year a board fence was built around the school house to keep the cattle from the doors and to serve as a hitching rack for the horses children rode to school.

At the close of the century, the state reported that nearly all schools were ungraded, school terms were usually three to five months, and licenses were granted to teachers on the basis of examinations conducted by the city or county superintendent. The average salary for teachers was $260.66 per year.

you look at the distribution of the national wealth," he said.

The profit picture for business and industry has taken a plunge, even though on the surface it appears profits are rising. The true indicator of rising profits is in dividends paid, Miller said, and these have likewise deterioriated.

"The business scene is pretty bleak," he said. "If you can get optimistic about the future from these data, you're looking through different glasses than I have."

Another factor affecting the market is the attitude of people, which in turn affects their productivity.

"In my opinion, peoples' attitude toward work has never been lower," he said. "They're absent more from work and they don't care as much about their jobs. This makes it difficult to have output growing."

While per capita income has increased, per worker income has not increased to keep up with spiralling inflation, he said, and this has affected the workers' attitudes.

While faced with less profits, bad worker attitudes, business and industry have also been strapped with environmental concerns, concerns which require large expenditures of funds but which do not necessarily increase efficiency or profitability.

The international environment, with the American dollar under attack, is also bleak for American business and industry, he said.

In addition, American industry faces the problem of paying tremendous fixed costs for machinery and technological advances, costs which are inflexible.

Even though the outlook is bleak, Miller said now may be a good time to invest some money in the common stock market, but he said it would be difficult to invest a great deal of money with a degree of comfort.

He suggested investments in gold and silver as somewhat stable.

Coffee, retired economics department head at WTSU, agreed with Miller in the bleak outlook for American business and industry, but based his projection primarily on growth factors.

To provide jobs in the marketplace for the expanding population, and to provide goods and services for the expanding population, industry and business must grow each year, he said.

But, citing various figures, Coffee indicated there is simply not enough money available to back up the growth. Since 1965 a decline in the rate of growth has been experienced primarily because of a decrease in corporate profits, punitive taxation and regulatory policies, and a decline in productivity.

"I don't know whether there's a possibility of reversing the trend or not," he said, "but I think we're in a critical long-range situation."

The next interdepartmental seminar will be at 6:30 p.m. April 3 with Mrs. Hope McKenzie, of the WTSU English Department, discussing "Value of Criticism on the Society."

said.

"Each year about 1500 companies locate, expand or relocate a plant and 20,000 agencies like the Canyon Chamber of Commerce, like the public service company, are going after those 1500 companies," he said.

He said civic leaders should be receptive to suggestions from local residents who might have relatives or friends in industries which are considering expansion.

Civic leaders should work with area development teams from the electric company, the gas company, and the area chambers of commerce to help locate prospects to contact.

The Texas Industrial Commission produces each month a list of suspects, industries which might be interested in relocating in Texas, and this list should be utilized, he said.

But, before prospecting for industry begins, Moore stressed, the civic leaders should be well prepared to present their city as an attractive place for industry to locate. This includes community betterment.

The leaders also need to prepare literature and data to prove to prospects they can make a profit in the Canyon community.

The leaders also need to be aware of if not well versed on the various financial sources available to prospective industries.

An industrial site or park should be available so prospects can be shown specifics about utilities and prices.

To accomplish these, a team approach should be used to prospect and talk with prospective industry, he said. The team approach divides expertise among several civic leaders and makes for a smooth presentation.

During the afternoon, the industrial commission and electric company representatives discussed other factors influencing the desirability of a community in the eyes of prospective industries, factors such as general living conditions and government, labor force, sites, zoning, resources, education and training facilities and others.

summer.

"The feeling among local people is that since we're now vitally concerned with food and fiber as a world commodity and with the shortage in the world and the importance of food in the balance of payments agriculture should have a higher priority," he said.

Commissioners are expected to discuss during their Monday session the purchase of equipment for the Department of Public Safety, and paving of a county road.

Scout District Welcomes New Leaders Here

Randall District of Llano Estacado Council of the Boy Scouts of America conducted a board meeting Tuesday evening, March 4, at which time the new district scout executive, Jeff Morris of Hereford, was introduced.

New scoutmasters for Boy Scout Troop 31, Randy Cook, and Boy Scout Troop 127, Willis Haws, were introduced.

During the board session the discussion centered on leadership dinner prospects to aid scouting through funds with 14 names being proposed toward a goal of $6,500 for the district.

The scout board discussed several events including a "good turn" day to be conducted by Boy Scouts and Cubs on Saturday, March 8, whereby the boys will be hanging tags on doors throughout the city seeking goodwill donations. The goodwill donations will be collected in a drive March 15 by Troops 131 and 31 and Packs 66 and 31. It was also noted that last year's good will collections gave disabled persons 45 days of work from the local collection.

Discussion also included an upcoming scoutmasters idea exchange and skill swap to be held March 20 at 6:30 p.m. at Camp Don Harrington with scoutmasters being served a steak supper.

On April 5 an outdoor experience is planned at Camp Don Harrington to begin at 9 a.m. for scout leaders and scoutmasters. It will be an all day training session. Also upcoming will be a TR-6 meeting for adult training on skills and leadership activities with information available from Gene Grabber of the council.

Next regular district board meeting here will be April 1 at 7:30 p.m. in the Girl Scout House at Canyon.

WT Professor To Lead Seminar

Professor Phil Gensler, head of the West Texas State University Computer Information Systems Department, will present a commentary on data preparation at the Computer Users Conference March 12 and 13 at East Texas State University in Commerce.

He will head the discussion after the reading of a paper on the subject.

Elections . . .

Canyon City Commissioners J. Pat Stephens and Willis Harrison will not face opposition on the city commission ballot on April 1.

Harrison will glide into a third term on the council while Stephens will go into his second term.

Filing deadline for that election was Feb. 28.

Dr. Dudley Moore, local physician, will run unopposed in his bid to return to the Canyon School Board.

But, Walter Graham, a Canyon area cattleman, will face opposition for his place on the board. The school board adopted a new voting procedure recently with each member assigned a place and with candidates filing for a specific place on the ballot. Graham, who's served on school boards for 40 years in the Canyon area, faces Jerry Martindale of Amarillo in the April 5 election.

Filing deadline for the election was Wednesday afternoon.

Four incumbents on the South Randall County Hospital District board will also go into new terms unopposed. They are Mrs. Lois Hull, currently the board president; Bill Sternenberg, George Blackwell and Vernon Harman. All but Blackwell have served on the board since it was initially organized.

Filing deadline for that election, which is scheduled April 5, was also Wednesday afternoon.

Creative Projects Add Pleasure, Relaxation To City Woman's Life

NEEDLEPOINT CHESSBOARD COVER is the current project of Mrs. David (Jane) Wheeler, who is known for her original interpretations in needlepoint and crewel work. The chessboard squares are all being done in different stitches which will require 68 different designed stitches for the total board cover.

By LORENA MILLER

Aside from the creativity of needlepoint and crewel work, Mrs. David (Jane) Wheeler finds that these types of projects provide much personal pleasure and relaxation.

"I often do my own designs or adapt a design and like to use a lot of variety and textures in my stitching," commented the homemaker, university student, and teacher.

Mrs. Wheeler encourages her two daughters, Anne, 12, and Elizabeth, 14, to join her for an evening of needlepoint when other work and activities are complete.

"The girls like doing creative projects also, and last spring Elizabeth took a first place award in textile work in the Campfire Girls crafts program on one of her projects. The textile work is now proudly displayed in her father's office at the university," commented Mrs. Wheeler.

A native of Youngstown, Ohio, Mrs. Wheeler attended college at Mt. Holyoke College in Massachusetts to earn the undergraduate degree in geography and completed the master's degree in geography at the University of Michigan.

At the University of Michigan, she met David Wheeler from Saginaw, Michigan and became his bride in 1958. He was working on his master's degree in geography at the time the couple married and later went on to earn the Ph.D. in geography at the university there.

The Wheelers spent eleven years in Normal, Illinois, where he taught in the geography department at Illinois State University before switching to administration. Then Mrs. Wheeler took the position teaching geography and he became the associate dean of students and later became associate dean of the graduate school there.

Coming to Canyon in the summer of 1972, Dr. Wheeler is dean of the graduate school at West Texas State University. Mrs. Wheeler has continued her university courses including archaeology, geology and museology and is currently employed 20 hours each week at the Panhandle Plains Historical Museum here while taking advanced studies in museology.

While involved in university classes, Mrs. Wheeler has spent about 18 months doing needlepoint on a project which decorates the master bedroom. For the couple's Hollywood bed, Mrs. Wheeler has completed a needlepoint canvas using a variety of colors that match the Oriental rug on the floor. The design of the headboard was adapted from a pillow design seen many years ago.

Mrs. Wheeler noted that her father (a lawyer by profession) does a lot of weaving for relaxation making such items as mats, bedspreads, upholstery materials and suitings. She hopes to someday take a course in weaving for her own information.

A versatile homemaker, Mrs. Wheeler also likes to knit and crochets when necessary on items.

During 1974, Mrs. Wheeler presented fellow members of the Canyon Junior Forum with her own designed needlepoint kits including thread and canvas for their making of needlepoint decorations for holiday tree ornaments.

She also recently made a specially designed passport cover for Lois Hull, which was presented at a University Study Club meeting.

For her various creative projects, Mrs. Wheeler has a sizable "idea file" filled with projects to do someday, as well as a library of stitchery books for reference.

In the past, Mrs. Wheeler has been creative with decoupage plaques which decorate the family home at 1423 Creekmere. She has also taken tole painting lessons from Mary Jo Hales in Canyon for this line of creative interest.

"I have done some needlepoint designs using ancient Indian patterns from their basketry and pottery of the pre-historic Indian era," related Mrs. Wheeler. "Although I haven't tried any ceramic work at present, I hope to someday try my hand at ceramic pots too."

Another project, which she plans to work on the future, is an oversize wall-hanging to be designed with "birds which we saw last summer during our vacation at Craig Hinger's lodge in the mountains."

Miss Hufnagle Marries Volanty In Nuptial Ceremony March 8

Double ring nuptials uniting Miss Kathy Hufnagle in marriage with Harry Paul Volanty were confirmed in rites read Saturday, March 8, at 8 o'clock at the University Church of Christ in Canyon.

Bob Barnhill, minister of the Central Church of Christ in Amarillo, officiated at the nuptial exchange and a quartet from the West Texas State Church of Christ Bible Chair presented selections including Annie's Song by John Denver, Because Wedding Song, Whither Thou Goest, May The Lord Bless and Keep You and traditional wedding marches.

The bride is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. B.L. Hufnagle of Rt. 1, Canyon and graduated from Canyon High School in 1967. She earned the B.S. degree in home economics from Texas Tech University in 1970 and is presently a County Extension Agent in Home Economics for Potter County, member of the National Association of Extension Home Economists, the American Home Economics Association, American Association of University Women and Daughters of the American Revolution.

Mrs. Booker Osborne of Washington, Pennsylvania is the bridegroom's mother. He is the general manager of Courtesy American Motors in Amarillo and was formerly named as the 1973 "salesman of the year" by American Motors Corporation with which he has been employed for seven years. He was previously a student of West Virginia University and served four years with the United States Marines.

Spring flowers in urns completed the church setting which featured a large candelabra with hurricane lamp globes over the tapers, and flanking candelabrum framing the setting.

Escorted and presented in marriage by her father, the bride wore a formal length dress of candlelight French silk featuring a fitted bodice with overlay of lace and tracery accents of miniature pearls. The long sleeves were traced in lace with a ruffle effect and wrist cuffs designed with a reptition of the lace and pearl highlights. The flowing full length bridal skirt was marked in gores by rows of seed pearls and extended into a formal chapel train.

The bride's wedding veil featured sheer illusion with a wide lace border and swept to the back into a chapel train effect. Highlighting the wedding veil, which was attached to a lace and pearl encrusted headdress, were cascading pearl ropes. She carried a white satin covered Bible which was embedded in a cascade bouquet of roses and baby's breath. Her bridal slippers had pearl and lace highlights matching the wedding dress and for her jewelry the bride wore a single strand of pearls, which were a wedding gift from the bridegroom, and had diamond earstuds from her grandmother for "something old" in the bridal tradition.

Miss Jana Pronger of Farwell, Texas served as the maid of honor and bridesmaid was Miss Katie Upshaw of Newington, Connecticutt, with Mrs. Judy Abbott of Ponca City, Oklahoma (a cousin of the bride) serving as bridesmatron and Miss Christie Abbott, also of Ponca City, Okla. (a second cousin of the bride) serving as the junior bridesmaid. The bridal attendants were gowned in candlelight dresses of matte jersey with fitted bolero design, draped skirts and rolled necklines. Each wore a picture hat and carried an arm bouquet of spring flowers.

The junior bridesmaid wore a sheer dress over candlelight underlay with a picture hat similar to that worn by the flower girl, Miss Betty Jo Downing of Canyon.

Ringbearer was the bride's nephew, Blaine N. Hufnagle of Canyon, and attending the bridegroom were Bill Gilliland of Amarillo as best man; and groomsmen Paul Keim of Amarillo, Ron Hufnagle of Canyon, brother of the bride, and Mike Hitchcock of Amarillo, a junior groomsman. For the occasion the bridegroom selected a brocade candlelight tuxedo jacket and other men of the wedding party wore black tuxedo jackets with candlelight shirts.

Ushering duties were shared by Steve Hitchcock of Amarillo and John Plaster of Lubbock.

A green sheer cloth covered the reception table for the wedding reception in the church fellowship hall. The table was accented with a boquet of spring flowers and crystal appointments as the wedding guests were registered by Mrs. Ron Hufnagle.

Wedding cake was served by the bride's aunts, Mrs. Willard Clanton of Dinuba, California, Mrs. Clyde Waggoner of Ponca City, Oklahoma, and Mrs. John Plaster of Canyon. Serving the fruitpunch were Mrs. Layden Hitchcock of Amarillo and Mrs. L.L. Edlin of Odessa.

Following the reception, the couple departed for a wedding trip to Guadalahara, Mexico with the bride travelling in a yellow and green knit suit complemented with matching shoes and yellow straw bag.

After March 17, the couple will establish their home at 2700 S.W. 16th, Apt. 133 in Amarillo.

River Trip In Colorado This Month

For the third consecutive year, the West Texas State University Student Activities Council will sponsor a five-day float trip on the Colorado River March 24-29.

The trip will begin at 8 a.m. at Green River, Utah and end 140 miles downstream at Hite on Lake Powell five days later.

Jack Tillinghast, WTSU health and physical education instructor, will serve as head of the trip.

"We started the trip to have something to do over Easter and my interest in outdoors had a lot to do with it," he explained.

"It's good experience and a good introduction to river running. I recommend it to anyone who plans to ride through the Grand Canyon on the longer trips."

The trip will include the Canyonlands National Park and the white-water of Cataract Canyon of the Colorado River in Utah.

Miles of scenery, ancient Indian ruins and side canyons to hike are features of the excursion.

All cooking is done by the boatmen. Those going should bring clothing, personal items and a camera. All camping equipment, bedrolls, waterproof duffel bags, camera boxes and life preservers will be furnished.

Professional guides will accompany the group.

Cost for the trip is $150 per person, which is the price based on 14 passengers in a boat. A smaller passenger load will cost more.

The price is half of the regular summer cost for the trip, Tillinghast said.

All interested persons are invited to go, not just those associated with West Texas State University, Tillinghast said.

Deadline for reservations is March 17, at which time the full fare is due.

Interested persons should contact Jim Holston or Jack Tillinghast at 656-2296 or write Box 825, WTSU, Canyon, Texas 79016.

Dr. Lincoln Hawkins, center, a chemist with Bell Laboratories, discussed synthetic plastics with the group.

Motivation Speech Topic On Friday

Have you ever wondered why people behave the way they do, including yourself?

Speaker Dan Baker will appear Friday at the West Texas State University Activities Center in a day-long session to explain "Human Motivation."

The workshop will open with registration at 8:30 a.m., with a registration fee of $6. Pre-registration through Dr. Hollice Snyder of the WTSU School of Business is $5. West Texas State students with I.D.'s may register for $1.

Session One, following a welcome by University President Lloyd I. Watkins and Business Dean J. Stuart Lawrance, will run from 9:30-11:30 a.m. Session Two will last from 1:30-3:30 p.m.

Baker will seek to answer such questions as "Why is there a hunger and need for recognition, ahcievement, status, security, to be needed, wanted, to be loved?" and "Do you really want to start living and enjoying life?"

The former Methodist minister is now a successful special agent

High School French Test Set At WTSU

High school students from the Panhandle area will take the 40th Annual French Test March 21 at 2 p.m. in the West Texas State University Education Building.

Participants will take an audio-lingual test, which is prerecorded on tape, reel or cassette, and a written section.

Awards will be presented on the chapter and state level and the regional and national level.

Objectives for the contest are to stimulate more students to begin and to continue with their study of French and to help identify individual student and teacher achievement.

The contest is sponsored by the American Association of Teachers of French.

Mrs. Monica Hieman, modern languages instructor, estimates 75 participants.

Going somewhere? Or been? The Canyon News wants to know about it — and so do its readers.

Poet Addresses Students

Throughout the past week, students on the West Texas State University campus have been observing Chicano Awareness Week.

One of the highlights of the week was a program presented by internationally famed poet Ricardo Sanchez, Friday night in the Activities Center.

Sanchez spoke on the role of Latin and Chicano literature of today.

Speaking on the college campus isn't new to Sanchez. In the past two years, he has spoken on approximately 300 campuses. His lectures have taken him from Yale to Stanford.

"Chicano literature does exist and has for the last 120 years. It deals with the human condition," Sanchez said. "We've always realized who we were and the last ten years has shown what has been done during the past 150 years," he added.

Sanchez has published four books of poetry and short stories with his major work being "Canto y Grito Liberacion."

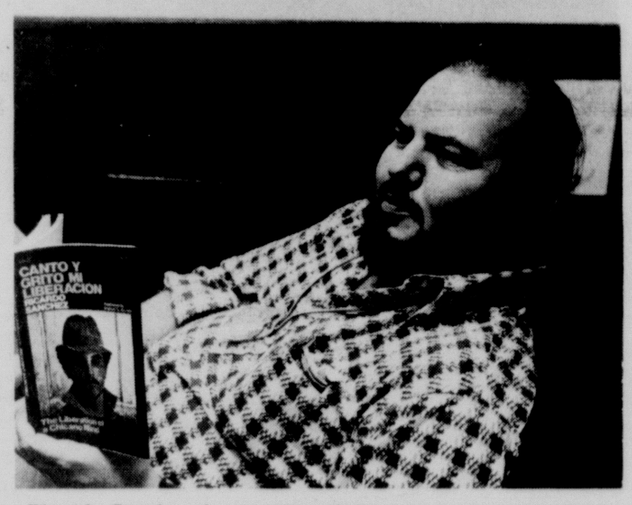
Besides the books, Sanchez has authored over 20 anthologies and 70-80 magazine articles.

He is also a contributing editor for "La Luz," a Chicano magazine published in Denyer and "Quitzol," a magazine published on the Navajo Reservation in Arizona.

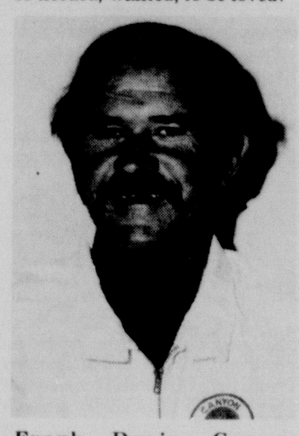
In addition to his writing and lecturing, Sanchez is on the teaching staff of El Paso Community College.

Originally from El Paso, Sanchez uses West Texas and El Paso as his homebase and "sees the world as a laboratory."

Future plans of Sanchez include a trip to Africa.



Ricardo Sanchez, internationally known poet, spoke on the WTSU campus Friday night as a part of Chicano Awareness Week.



Frank Davis, Canyon volunteer fireman of the week, is a Canyon native and graduated from CHS in 1960. He has been with the Fire Department four years and is a meter reader for Southwestern Public Service Co. He and his wife, Joy, have one son, Steve, 11.

Professor To Submit Paper

Dr. Grillo's paper will discuss methods by which questionnaires can be analyzed when respondents fail to answer all of the questions.

The paper was Dr. Grillo's dissertation in 1971 at the University of New Mexico in Albuquerque.

The meeting is the first where papers in CIS will be presented.

All sciences will be represented at the meeting.

Season Starting Slow On Eagle Diamond

The Canyon High School Eagle baseball team is having a hard time getting everything together this season.

Opening the season against Amarillo's Palo Duro, the Eagles split a double-header by winning one game 6-5 and dropping the next 7-3. Canyon then lost to Caprock 12-0.

Friday, the team travelled to Pampa to play in a four team tournament. They opened against Pampa and lost 3-2. In the match for third place, the Eagles were downed by Dumas 7-1. The Canyon boys hosted a double-header here Saturday against Borger. The results weren't available at press time.

Last year the Eagles ended their season with a 11-10 record. They missed the district championship by one point by losing the last game to Dumas 7-6.

Coach Bob Sloan, although getting off to a slow start, expects to have a good year.

"We have a lot of potential, but we are real young," Sloan said. Out of the 26 players in the high school baseball program, there are only two seniors.

"As soon as we beat some good caliber teams, I think we will go on and do well," Sloan said.

Sloan points to excellent speed on the team as the strong point for this year's baseball team. "We should also get some good pitching before the season ends," the coach commented. Presently, there are 14 boys out for pitching positions.

Sloan carries 14 players on the varsity squad. The starting nine include three sophomores, four juniors and two seniors. The reamining 12 players make up the junior varsity team. The JV team has a 16 game schedule.

Heart Group Has Session

Randall County chapter of the American Heart Association conducted a regular business session Wednesday at the office of the county chairman, Reggie Reeves.

The group received a report on the recent blood pressure clinics conducted at both the West Texas State Bank and First National Bank in Canyon. The blood pressure clinics were offered free to the public and 177 persons took advantage of the service conducted by the local chapter.

Plans were reviewed concerning a cyclethon fund raising project to be held in April, tentatively set to coincide with Greek Week at West Texas State University. The cyclethon riders will seek business and individual sponsors for the event when further plans are announced.

Cordell Huddleston was appointed to serve as chairman of the chapter's nominating committee and will report at a dinner meeting on April 11. The meeting will also serve as officer election time with husbands and wives of Heart Association members as guests for the occasion.

Two Injured In Accident

An accident involving a semi tractor-trailer and a pickup has left an Arkansas man in serious condition in Northwest Texas Hospital's Intensive Care Unit and a Canyon man in good condition in Canyon's Palo Duro Hospital.

Weldon B. Hager, 58, of Canyon escaped serious injury when the pickup he was driving was hit from behind by a semi truck driven by Kenneth Joe Reichman, 24, of Atkins, Ark.

According to DPS Officer Jessie Hooper, the Hager vehicle was struck from the rear by the tractor-trailer. Both were heading north. The vehicles were locked together for approximately 200 feet. The pickup then broke loose from the truck and overturned three times coming to a stop 245 feet from the point of impact. The semi went 326 feet from the point of impact.

Both accident victims were pinned in the wreckage. It took rescurers approximately 45 minutes to free Hager from his demolished pickup and it took nearly two hours and three wreckers to free Reichman.

"I am very thankful that the Canyon Rescue Squad was there. They really did an outstanding job," Patrolman Hooper stated.

The accident attracted nearly 200 spectators.

Springtime Theme At Brownie Event

"Springtime" was the theme of a dad-daughter box supper involving Brownie Troops 163, 172 and 148 Friday evening at Rex Reeves Elementary School.

The 45 Brownie members and their fathers were presented with a film presentation about scouting which was shown by Len Slesick. Cadette scouts of Troop 54 assisted with the event.

Weldon B. Hager, 58, of Canyon was pinned in the wreckage of his pickup for 45 minutes Wednesday afternoon following an accident one mile south of Canyon. Hager is listed in good condition at Palo Duro Hospital.

TERRI BOND of Canyon High School is pictured with one of her artworks at the school since her portfolio of art was selected at the Regional Scholastic Art Awards to be sent to New York for competition toward national scholarships.

Canyon Art Students Win Scholastic Awards

With 35 pieces entered in the recent Regional Scholastic Art Awards competition sponsored by Western Plaza, the Canyon High School art department won a number of prizes.

The student art was displayed in the Western Plaza Mall and several of the students listed with their highest award garnered other ratings from the show, according to Lanelle Hagemeier and Charlotte Brantley, art instructors.

Terri Bond had her portfolio selected to be sent to New York for further competition toward national scholarships. Single works by CHS students, Eric Van Pelt, John King, Christi Prichard, Bart Byars and Kelly Sunderman were also selected for further study in the New York competition and these students were recipients of Gold Key Finalist rankings.

Earning Gold Keys in the regional contest also were Nina Nance and Michael Hammons.

Regional certificate winners for one or more pieces in the recent show were: Karma Denton, Vicki Gerber, Vivian Gill, Jim Judkins, Jerry Lewis, Jada Malone, Debbie Moreland, Kim Yarbrough, Jo Beth Price, Kenny Schneider, Janice Bass, Dettie Byrd, Jerrilou Carruth, Joeline Crow, and Melody Pair.
